DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 8-18 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tomimaru (11-13627) in view of Mizutani (JP2-27170)

Tomimaru disclose a motor body in fig. (2) comprising a output shaft (B) projecting from a front end of the motor body (11), a power supplying terminal coupled to the motor body made of elastic material, a grounding portion (23) disposed near a rear end of the motor body in a direction substantially orthogonal to the output shaft and a weight eccentrically secured to the output shaft (13). Tomimaru does not show the terminal having a first, second and third portion.

Mizutani teaches a motor in fig. (4) comprising a power terminal having a first portion (51d) extending substantially parallel to the output shaft, a second portion extending (51e) substantially parallel to the first portion coupled to the bent portion wherein the bent section maintains a position at least far from the motor body as the first portion.

Misutani also disclose the third portion (51c) in a curved manner from the rear end of the second portion for the purpose of obtaining an electrical connection. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the motor of Tomimaru with the teaching of the connecting terminal of Mizutani for the purpose of reducing manufacturing cost.

Referring to fig.13-18. It has been held that a recitation with respect to the manner in which a claimed apparatus is intended to be employed does not differentiate the claimed apparatus from a prior art apparatus satisfying the claimed structural limitations. Ex parte Masham, 2 USPQ2d 1647(1987).

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed 9/18/02 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

In response to applicant's arguments that; Tomimaru uses a spring instead of a terminal is noted.

However, fig. 2 clearly shows a terminal (22) having an elastic contact disposed near the far end of the motor.

In response, to applicant arguments that Mizutani's do not show a first portion parallel to the output shaft of the motor and a bent portion section coupled to the first portion but not extending closer to the motor body than the first portion is noted.

However, Mizutani clearly shows in fig. 4 and 5 terminal having a first (51d) portion parallel to the out-put shaft of the motor and a bent portion (51c) section coupled to the first portion but not extending closer to the motor body than the first portion.

In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992).
